Question referred

Can the company proceed to a disciplinary hearing on the current record, and what procedural safeguards should be followed?

Counsel advice

The current record supports continuing the investigation but is not yet sufficient to determine the allegation. Interview the approving manager and preserve the underlying leave and expense records before deciding whether to issue a disciplinary charge.

Procedural guidance

Give the employee a reasonable opportunity to respond to any new material. Keep the investigation and any later disciplinary decision separately documented.

Recommended follow-up

Complete two interviews, preserve the source records, and return the consolidated investigation pack for a further legal review.
